

A house free of pet odours by Christmas

Fresh Pets neutralises the doggy smell that can pervade the home.

THE YEAR has flown by and shortly we will all have to start thinking about our Christmas guests again.

Fresh Pets Ltd have come up with a point that many of us would have missed: As dog lovers we often forget the fact that visitors to our homes can detect our pets' odours. However, according to Fresh Pets this may soon be a thing of the past.

Put very simply you spray Fresh Pets onto your dog's meals and it neutralises their odours where they begin - in the digestive tract.

Within a week or so of regular use, the offensive odours should have dramatically reduced. Then, by a little trial and error (increasing the dose), the odours can be reduced so that they are undetectable. This also applies to their unpleasant wind, too:

Odours are caused by putrefying undigested matter, so logically their approach of neutralising this before the odour is formed makes a lot more sense than rushing around with pleasant perfumed sprays. Their studies have shown that Fresh Pets does not harm the beneficial bacteria in the animal's gut, but can produce a healthier looking coat.

At just £9.95 a bottle they should be pretty busy this Christmas!
